YOUNG HUNTERS MUST BE ACCOMPANIED BY PARENT OR GUARDIAN

In order to avoid any misunderstanding of the Maine hunting laws as they apply to juveniles, Chief Warden Elmer Ingraham has issued an appeal to youngsters and parents or guardians who plan to hunt this fall. "It is vitally important," states the Chief Warden, "that a clear understanding of this law be uppermost in our minds."

Maine hunting regulations specifically state that no person under the age of 16 years may hunt under any circumstances without being accompanied at all times by parent or guardian. There are three considerations relative to the juvenile law which are frequently misunderstood. To put them in the form of questions and answers, they are as follows:

1. Can a person under the age of 16 hunt alone on land of his parents?

Answer: No, because the law is primarily designed as a safety law to protect the youngster as well as others.

2. At what age is a person considered an adult under the interpretation of this law?

Answer: An adult is a person 21 years of age or older.

3. Can a parent or guardian take a boy or girl under 16 out with him and post him on a stand and drive deer toward him?

Answer: No, because the youngster must be accompanied at all times by the parent or guardian, which means in sight at all times. The Maine Warden Service has been instructed to enforce this juvenile law rigidly. The reasons are obvious.

An analysis of the 1955 hunting accident record in Maine further emphasizes the seriousness of this law. From a total of 58 hunting accidents last year, 21, or 43 percent, were caused by youngsters under the age of 21. Six of these cases involved shooters under the age of 16.

The above statistics bear mute testimony to the vital need for careful attention to our juvenile law. Cooperate with your local Game Warden this fall and help make Maine the safest hunting state in the land.

The Bethel Community Health Council will meet this Thursday evening at the American Legion rooms. The speaker will be Dr. W. H. Boynton. His subject is rheumatic fever heart disease. The public is urged to attend.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION NEWS LETTER

A warning to veterans and widows and children of deceased veterans receiving pension from the Veterans Administration to report immediately any increase in income that would raise their annual income above statutory limitations was sounded today by M. L. Stoddard, Manager, Veterans Administration Center, Togus.

To remain eligible for pension under the law, according to Stoddard, pensioners of World War I, World War II, and of the Korean Conflict may not have an annual income from other sources exceeding $1,429 without dependents, or $2,750 with wife or minor children.

VA checks the annual income of those receiving pension through the medium of annual questionnaires which are distributed about January 1 every year.

Later if the person receiving the pension fails to notify VA promptly of an increase in income which raises his annual income above the statutory limit, payments will be discontinued retroactively to the first of the year.

This creates an overpayment, Stoddard said, and is subject to recovery by the Government.

If the person receiving the pension notifies VA promptly of such an increase, payments will be discontinued as of the date the last payment was made and no overpayment will result.

Stoddard said veterans, widows and children receiving pension can save themselves inconvenience and possibly money by notifying VA promptly of any increase in income which would put them above the statutory limitation.

Pensioners are payable to veterans for permanent and total disabilities of non-service-connected nature, and to the widows and children of deceased veterans for non-service-connected deaths, providing the applicants are otherwise eligible.

Stoddard pointed out that any VA office can explain full eligibility requirements for pension.

* THE AMERICAN WAY *

by George
Peck

(Editor's Note: George Peck is Chairman of the Laymen's National Committee, sponsor of National Sunday School and Bible Weeks.)

This columnist is getting a bit weary at the constant prating of the "put the government in business" proponents. They sing the same song over and over again, a song that lacks melody and the lyric of which is neither poetry nor common sense. It is number zero on the "Hit Parade." This monotonous dirge attempts to convey to an intelligent American citizenry that the Federal Government is "giving away" the natural resources of the nation.

The fact of the matter is that the real "Giveaway" is when the Federal Government embarks on a project that could be better undertaken by free enterprise. It gives away the hard-earned tax money of the harassed taxpayer. In so doing, not only does Federal government unnecessarily tap the Federal Treasury, but it sets up a project that will pay nothing in the way of taxes into the Treasury, creating a free enterprise company that would pay taxes.

So when Government takes on a job that constitutionally should and could be done by a free enterprise company, it is a double-headed "Giveaway." The taxpayers get hit in the pocketbook, both coming and going.

Between now and November 6, a combination of New Dealers, Fair Dealers, Screw Dealers, Socialists, Power Punks and starry-eyed idealists will be blasting away at the conservatives who believe, and rightly so, that the way to "conserve" our national resources is to keep government from exploiting them by turning their development over to unscrupulous companies under strict government regulation. The evidence of the facts prove that the "left-wingers" do not have a leg to stand on, but then, wherever did a Socialist pay any attention to facts?

Of course, all the foregoing refers to the battle that has been going on and is still being waged between those who insist that government develop electric power and those who insist that free enterprise take on the job.

Unfortunately there are adherents of both major political parties who favor government development over private. Fortunately, however, many more adherents of both major political parties hold to the belief that free enterprise can do the job better and more economically. On November 6, the latter have an opportunity to register their preference by voting for candidates pledged not to "Giveaway" any more of their money for government production of electric power—and it matters not whether these candidates wear the insignia of the donkey or the elephant.

On this subject of "Giveaways" I'm going to let the Beaumont Enterprise, an Independent Democratic daily, published at Beaumont, Texas, have the last word. In an editorial entitled "More Giveaway Propaganda" carried in its August 10, 1954, issue, it had this to say in part:

"Who is giving away what? When a bipartisan Federal authority, FPC, carefully studies the merits of a proposed power development in Hell's Canyon and finally decides that there is no justification for the government to spend possibly half a billion dollars of American taxpayers' money building a high dam in Hell's Canyon when the Idaho Power Company is willing and financially able to build smaller dams which will produce as much power as the government dam without using one cent of taxpayers' money, that is a 'giveaway' according to the New Dealers, Socialists and their political allies who harp endlessly on what they call 'giveaway' programs. It is astonishing how such nonsense can be accepted as gospel

AN ILL-DEFINED DEMOCRACY

"It is a pity that so many people make the mistake of regarding the American and French revolutions as basically the same," writes Felix Wittmer, in a brief article appearing on the editorial page of The Saturday Evening Post. "Actually our Revolution was a war of independence, a revolt of men who believed in the right to property, against the economic stupidity of the British. The leaders of the French Revolution, the radical Jacobins, were not satisfied with the checks and balances of representative government, but vaguely dreamed of a direct democracy

which opened the gates to the unchecked masses, and therefore the tyranny of the masses." Our Revolution goes on, was a success—it brought about the Constitution with its marvelous system of checks and balances, all devoted to protect individual liberty. The French Revolution, on the other hand, was a failure. In that it led to a reign of terror, the destruction of personal liberty, and the Napoleonic dictatorship.

This confusion as to the motives and results of the two revolutions had in Mr Wittmer's view, an ominous consequence: "In the name of an ill-defined 'democracy,' we have permitted the Trojan horse of foreign socialism to enter the American community. We have surrendered more and more personal rights to an ever-growing central government; permitted ourselves to be deprived of substantial savings by inflationary policies and onerous taxation."

Finally, Mr Wittmer makes a proposal—and it is one that every American who values freedom should heartily endorse: "Teachers and writers of textbooks should consider the instruction of the young in the real ideals of the American Revolution, as opposed to the violent doctrines of the European variety, too often peddled as the same thing."

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

One little four-word phrase has been heard in the news the last few years. It is destined to be much more in the news during the election year of 1956, and in the years to come.

That phrase is "the right to work." It has to do with a type of law which is now in effect in 17 of the states and is being advocated to many of the others. These rights to work laws vary somewhat in content but they are identical in purpose and in intent. They provide that membership in non-union organizations is a union shall not be a condition of employment. In other words they say that the employer cannot discharge a man because he declines to join a union, and that the union cannot have him discharged if he declines not to join. The union is to be a voluntary body. The laws therefore ban the union shop system under which the employer must join a union within a certain period of time, usually 30 days after going to work or be fired.

A National Right to Work Committee has been established in Washington headed by former Representative Harley of Taft-Hartley law fame. The opposition centers in the AFL-CIO union and is headed by its president, George Meany. The potential bitterness of the fight can be judged from this statement in a U. S. News & World Report account: "Unions now appear to be more upset by these right to work laws than by any other legislation on the books or proposed."

The unions argue that the laws are a veiled attempt at union busting. The attack on them has two phases. The laws have their genesis in the Taft-Hartley Act of 1947, which authorized their passage by the states at the same time it outlawed the closed shop. So the union will seek repeal of that section of the Taft-Hartley law. Then intense work will be done within the states in attempting to swing public opinion to the union side and in supporting the election of state legislators who are against the laws.

The proponents of right to work laws deny that they are anti-union. They say that the right to work without restriction from either employer or union is as basic as any right that there can be. They also say that the laws would tend to make the unions better and if they could not force men to join with unemployment the penalty for refusal, they would have to sell their services on the basis of value rendered.

Both sides, naturally, claim widespread public support. The last available factual evidence comes in the Kansas Republican primary. The incumbent governor had voted a right to work law, and this act was defeated by an opponent who supported the law. It was the first time in 26 years that a Kansas Republican governor had failed to be reelected.

Probably these laws are sure to become top political questions on the national and state level. Both sides will demand that candidates for legislative office stand up and be counted and under their stars knowers. And neither side will be satisfied with superficial answers.

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

Read Psalm 131:1-2 or Romans 12: 15-21.

Man goeth forth unto his work and to his labour until the evening. (Psalm 134:23.)

DURING World War II, the church of St Nicholas in Liverpool, England, was reduced to rubble—all except the porch and tower. A temporary building was erected. The altar and cross were placed in the porch. In the destroyed church building, the congregation had faced the East, their backs to the city. In the new structure, the congregation faced the city. The altar and the cross on it in the open porch and as their backdrop the city and its houses, shops, and stores; with its sins and its sorrows; with its market for buying and selling. Beyond lay the harbor, with ships in from the seven seas.

Thus it came about that the congregation no longer worshiped with their backs to the city. At the altar and the cross against the backdrop and vision of man's many activities, worship began in the worshiper's heart and broadened to the ends of the earth.

Prayer

Lord of all life, we thank Thee for the daily task by which we earn our daily bread. Grant unto us strength for this day and the vision to see our work as a means to serve and witness to Thee. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Thought for the Day

All work and all life must be judged in the light of the cross of Christ.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

Rev. Robert H. Harper

THE FOOLISH FARMER

IT IS said of one of the kings of England that he was one of the best of men and one of the worst of rulers. The foolish farmer of whom Jesus told was one of the best of farmers and one of the worst of men. And the last day of his life he made three great mistakes that brought him to ruin and eternal damnation.

His first mistake was living. It was brought to a head the last day he lived. He was a selfish, self-centered man, who lived for himself alone. This selfishness came to its dread fruition on his last day. His second mistake was thinking that he could feed his soul on corn, that he could satisfy the whole of life with material things. His third mistake was the belief that he had unlimited time to enjoy the things he had accumulated.

Yes, he thought he could satisfy his three-fold bring with that which perishes with the using, for he said to his soul: "Thou hast much goods laid up for many years." He vainly imagined that he had unlimited time to enjoy the things he had gathered.

But God said to him: "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall these things be which thou hast provided?" He learned that of earthly things he could take nothing away. Let us beware of the transitory and deceitful nature of earthly riches and so live that when the things of earth shall fail we may be received into the everlasting habitations.

the Church will be held Wednesday evening, Oct. 10, at the Town Hall. This will be preceded by a 6:30 family supper in charge of the A. U. W.

BAKER-MULLEN

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Andrews was the scene of a pretty wedding Friday evening at 8 o'clock when their granddaughter, Muriel Andrews Mullen and Richard Irvin Baker were united in marriage by Rev. Donald Hinckley of West Paris, the double ring service being used.

The bride is the daughter of H. Stanley Andrews of Bryant Pond and Alura Andrews of West Paris. The bridegroom is the son of Arthur Baker of West Paris and Hazel Duval of Springvale.

The bride wore a light grey suit and a corsage of pink rosebuds. Mrs. Leslie Thurlow was matron of honor, wearing a navy blue dress with corsage of pink rosebuds. Leslie Thurlow was best man.

The home was decorated with evergreen, pink chrysanthemums, and gladioli.

A reception followed the ceremony after which the bride cut the cake. The bride and groom were then served by Mrs. Ernest Packard.

NEW BULLETIN ON POULTRY HOUSE VENTILATION

Maine Extension Bulletin 466, "Poultry House Ventilation," is off the presses at the University of Maine. Copies may be obtained from county agents at County Extension Service offices or by writing the Bulletin Office, Extension Service, University of Maine, Orono. Good ventilation in Maine poultry houses will help prevent ammonia blindness, excessive heat, wet litter, chilled and sick birds, frozen pipes, and other difficulties. Discussing heat, air exchange, and management, the bulletin gives solutions of the ventilation problem.

Maine dairymen have found that both grass and corn silage make excellent feeds for their animals.

For Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; Thou art my strength and my shield; Thou art my God and my savior. (Psalm 133)

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever. (Psalm 138)

Traffic Emergency:

Although Traffic Problem Is Local Affair, Mounting Tolls Could Bring Federal Action

(Last of a Series)

Federal intervention and all that it implies in the way of regulations, red tape and bureaucracy could be a distinct possibility and a threat unless local and state governments take firm steps to halt the nation's soaring traffic toll.

Howard Pyle, former governor of Arizona now serving as deputy assistant to President Eisenhower, recently told a regional safety conference that the federal government may be required to act if traffic deaths continue to mount.

"The people of the United States could cut traffic deaths in half in six months if they really wanted to do it," Pyle told the delegates.

"What's happening on America's streets and highways today is murder—we might as well call it by its right name. And murder is something you just don't tolerate in a civilized society."

"Nevertheless, we are tolerating it and we're assuming it's something that can't be helped. But it can be helped."

"If the terrible traffic death rate continues, you're going to find an increasing determination on the part of some to appeal to the federal government to take over."

"That is not the answer," Pyle stated. "It's the last thing President Eisenhower wants, but the drain on our resources must be stemmed."

Howard Q. Kemper, president of Lumbermens Mutual Casualty

Company and of American Motorists Insurance Company, said the problem "can and must be solved on the local level and the state level because that's exactly where it exists."

Kemper pointed out that two out of every three drivers involved in fatal collisions live within 25 miles of the collisions.

Five out of every six drivers in fatal collisions are residents of the state in which the collisions occur.

"The fact that most drivers involved in traffic fatalities live nearby clearly shows where the traffic death problem must be attacked," Kemper said.

"Because the problem is essentially a local one, I'm sure that individual communities and the states can do a better job of solving it than anyone in far-off Washington."

"We also must recognize that federal intervention and federal control over 70,000,000 drivers must result in a new government bureau that will be larger than any we have today."

Safety experts are agreed that our rising traffic death toll, which is now headed toward a record mark of 42,000 lives in a single year, can be halted by a determined effort that includes:

—Strict and impartial enforcement of realistic laws.

—More vigorous prosecution in court and stiffer penalties for the more serious offenses.

—More rigid license requirements to keep unqualified drivers off the road.

—Revocation of driving privileges for accident repeaters and habitual traffic lawbreakers.

—Uniformity in state traffic laws and practices.

—Greater co-operation among states and among agencies within states.

Progress is being made on all these fronts. But it isn't enough. It won't be fast enough until you, your family, your friends and your neighbors insist on it.

To speed the progress and to make the roads safer for you and your loved ones, you'll have to get really angry whenever any police officer, prosecutor, judge or any other public official doesn't do his job properly.

As an individual driver, you can help save your own neck by obeying the traffic laws. Actually, traffic laws should be known as "safety" laws because the motorist who abides by them is a safe driver.

Whenever you're a pedestrian, obey the law, too. About one of every four traffic victims is a pedestrian. Most pedestrian deaths occur because pedestrians, themselves, violate the law. They literally ask to be hit.

Even if you, personally, obey the law, you still have to worry about getting hit by the drivers who don't. By insisting on and supporting strict and impartial traffic law enforcement, you can help reduce the toll taken by highwaymaniacs.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Adjusting the proper distance between subject and camera helped to make this an excellent picture.

Not Too Near, Not Too Far

ONE of the most common faults in picture taking is the failure to pay enough attention to the distance between camera and subject. This can especially be a problem with a large non-adjustable camera. So many people disregard the fact that they are not designed for taking really close pictures. You should not attempt to find distance when taking pictures of a face with such cameras, if you want a image that is sharp and clear.

To make sure, know the location of the camera in relation to the subject. The operating manual will contain a list of tips and a diagram showing the correct distance. If you are not sure, ask someone who knows.

It is a good idea to get nearer with a large camera, a close-up attachment will be a help. The operating manual will tell you how to use it.

Remember that taking pictures at the right distance is very important — not too far away so as to lose your subject — or so near you get a fuzzy or blurred result. Don't forget your prime objective is to get a good picture of your subject.

It Takes More Than Houses To Make An American Community

How much more? To begin with, it takes thrifty, healthy, happy people who love and value freedom. Then, it takes good schools, playgrounds for the children, public libraries, hospitals and churches.

It takes telephones, electricity, plenty of pure water and all the other utilities essential to modern comfort and health. It takes firemen and traffic cops. It takes shops and stores where all the products of this rich country are sold.

Behind all this stands industry. Manufacture and marketing of useful products from raw or semi-processed materials provide economic bone and sinew of every community—large or small. Forest industries perform this vital economic role in more than 60,000 towns and cities around the United States.

GOULD ACADEMY

Gould Wins Opener 13-0

Gould Academy won its 1956 opener by defeating South Paris, 13-0. It was the fourth game of the season for the Cardinals and the opener for the winners who packed too much weight and power for the lighter Paris outfit.

Denied a touchdown by a penalty in the first period, the Huskies came back in the second period to score. After Jim Murphy put the ball on the 20 yard line with a 25 yard run, Jim Hill carried around right end to score. Smith rushed for the conversion and Gould led 7-0 at half time.

Most of the play during the third period was at midfield with neither team threatening. In the final stanza Gould advanced to the 15 yard line from which Smith went off right tackle to score knocking up. The extra point failed and Gould led 13-0 which ultimately proved the final score.

Gould JV's Win

Last Monday the Gould JV's defeated the South Paris JV's by a 19-11 score. The teams consisted almost entirely of Freshmen and Sophomores in an effort to develop new talent for coming years.

The Husky underdogs will play the following schedule: Monday, Oct. 8, at Bridgton; Monday, Oct. 15, at South Paris; Monday, Oct. 22, Bridgton at Gould; Monday, Oct. 29, Stephens Brook at Rumford.

Varsity at Norway Saturday

Clark Smith's eleven will travel to Norway Saturday for their second game of the 1956 season. All the starting members came through the opener at Paris last Saturday to good shape and there will probably be no change in the starting lineup. The game is slated for 2 p. m. on Saturday on the Norway fair grounds.

Gould Host in Fryeburg Thineade

On Friday at 3:30 the Gould Academy Cross Country team will meet Fryeburg Academy. The 1955 runners defeated Kennett High of Conway, N. H., last week and will be trying to make it two straight on Friday. They, however, will be meeting a much tougher job one who has beaten them a number of times in the last few years and the Husky runners will have to be at their best to garner another victory. The start and finish of the race will be in front of Fryeburg High House.

Gould called Kennett with a score of 15 to 50 at Kennett Thursday (Sept. 28) Kennett tied for first with Cambridge Dick O'Grady, Maine Jockey, Guy Whitten and Elmer Ruffe finished next, in that order for Gould. After them came

FARM HOUSING LOANS AVAILABLE

Eligible farm owners in Oxford and Androscoggin Counties may borrow from the Farmers Home Administration to build or repair farm houses and other essential farm buildings. Elwyn R. Morrow, the agency's county supervisor serving local farm families said today. He said the farm housing loans were made available under recent legislation. A total of $25,000,000 has been provided for these loans.

Interest on the loans will be 4 per cent per year on the unpaid principal. Repayments will be scheduled over periods up to 25 years.

Conservation Farming In Oxford County

by Douglas L. Marston, Soil Conservation Service

Philip G. Andrews of Fryeburg has been re-elected Chairman of the Board of Supervisors of the Oxford County Soil Conservation District for another year. Other officers elected at their September meeting include Bertrand C. Buok of Buckfield, Vice-Chairman; Robert D. Hastings of Bethel, Secretary; and W. Henry Allen of Hiram as Treasurer. The main item of business at the meeting was a discussion of the proposed District Woodlot Improvement Crew. The Supervisors are going slow on this project as they realize that there are many problems involved. The Supervisors feel that this is a very worthwhile project and they hope to have the crew operating on their first lot in October.

The District owned planter is expected to start operating for the fall planting season about October 10. The large, heavy duty machine will start work on burned-over areas around Brownfield and Denmark and Hiram. The lighter machine will plant the open fields and pastures.

The Supervisors are also planning a demonstration of the tree planting machines at the District lot in Brownfield. Both planters will be in operation for this field day. We are planning the demonstration for the week of October 15.

BOWLING

The Greater Bethel Bowling League got off to a flying start Tuesday night, with everybody bowling way off their feed.

B. J. Chapman thought he was at Fryeburg Fair. Herb Lyon had been picking too many McIntosh. Ken Wing had his shootin' eye, with 3 string high for the Lions Club with a 280. Al Smith says farming is an asset and Bill Chapman should follow him around. Al got an evening high of 207. Rudy Royer got a three string 263 for the A&P postmen.

The week of Oct. 15, the boys will elect their officers and official competition will start. It is hoped that two more teams will join up. The bowling is strictly for fun, with each man paying for his own. Shoes and locker room privileges are available at a low cost, and a lot of fun can be had during the winter.

The Junior League has 30 boys lined up and will start next week. We plan to have a midweek league with the boys in the grammar school.
